EPA TO HOLD FINAL PUBLIC HEARING ON SHATTUCK ALLARD, WEBB TO ATTEND SATURDAY'S HEARING IN DENVER

Denver, CO – The National Environmental Protection Agency Ombudsman will conduct a public hearing on the Shattuck Superfund site located in the Overland Park area of Denver on Saturday, October 16. The hearing will begin at 10:00 a.m. at the John Collins United Methodist Church, which is located at the intersection of Iliff and South Bannock in southwest Denver.

U.S. Senator Wayne Allard (R-CO) will attend the hearing. EPA officials are expected to give a report on the current investigation of the Shattuck Superfund site and hear public comments on what should happen to the waste currently stored at the site.

“I want to extend an invitation to anyone interested in the future of the Shattuck Superfund site to attend this very important public hearing,” Allard said. “The hearing will be the communities last opportunity to tell the EPA what should be done at the Shattuck Superfund site before they make their final recommendation.”

EPA officials have stated that they plan to announce at the end of October their final decision on the future of the Shattuck Superfund site.
